La Belle Vie

In a world of multi-tasking and attention deficit, the art of focusing on a single act becomes precious. Adopting a more considered approach to living, householders design their homes accordingly, creating summer escapes for respite and focus. Home décor embraces this new pace of life, where householders find inspiration in activities and environments that help them regulate and slow down.

Colour Therapy

The desire to live the healthiest life possible drives this optimistic story. Drawing inspiration from sensory exhibitions and the rising awareness of how colour and light affect mood, this trend responds to a desire to create a calm yet uplifting atmosphere. Change the colour and light within the home to follow their natural rhythms, creating spaces to relax and recharge in, positively impacting their mood and well-being.

Gardens of Babylon

The Middle East as an emerging design and cultural hotspot provides rich inspiration for this trend. The combination of the region's dry arid landscapes, maximalist aesthetics and a new wave feminist movement creates an interesting dynamic for change and is inspiring designers all over the world.

Urban Retreat

As urbanisation continues across the globe, the role of cities and our place within them is being rethought. This summer story is driven by a desire to create homes that promote a better way of living in bustling urban epicentres. Householders prioritise décor, materials and products that create healthy environments where they can relax and take breaks from busy city life.
